Advocates Of Safety For Our Industry's Workers

NWRA's Safety Committee is dedicated to bold, strategic efforts focused on best-in-class safety performance. NWRA's Safety Monday e-newsletter, safety manuals and seminars help you train your personnel to reduce injuries and fatalities. ANS Z245 safety standards set performance standards for waste and recycling equipment and facilities in all 50 states.

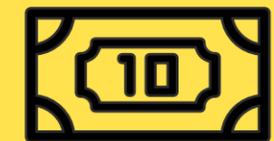

NWRA's Swift COVID-19 Response

The service our waste and recycling industry provides not only keeps our streets clean but also protects the public's health by disposing of waste. The Department of Homeland Security designated waste collection as "Essential Critical Infrastructure" at the request of NWRA in the early weeks of the viral outbreak.

Education, Information & Market Statistics

NWRA's highly attended and in-demand webinars focus on topics and trends important to our members. Newsletters, industry reports and educational sessions keep you informed about the latest trends and help you make smart business decisions. NWRA's market statistics and data program provides economic trend analyses and forecasts for your industry, helping you gauge your company's performance and develop better business plans.

NWRA Member Savings Programs

Many members report that the money saved by being a member more than covers their annual dues. Our member savings program provides discounts on services that you use to run your business every day.
